There is too much cheese paring, going on in steamers hence to Macao. It will not pay, and it is dangerous. It is absurd in a rich proprietory like that of the Fei-seen to adopt the miserable shifts they do to save one single dollar. We say it is impolitio and dangerous and we shall have more to say upon the subject. When we see grasping and cheese-paring made the guiding principles of a steam boat proprietory we always prognosticate evil, and we have been right several times.

AT the meeting of the gentlemen awateurs which took place at the theatre on Monday last Mr. Pollard, on behalf of himself and committee men, made a statement to the following denormand effect. It had effect been the the aim of both himself and colleagues to give every inducement to aroutes visiting this colony and it had only been in cases where it was absolutely impossible at the time to give them the use of the theatre, that it had ever been refused. It must be remembered that the whole of the scenery had to be painted "in the body of the building, and it often became necessary to postpone a performance to to as much as three weeks after the evening bad originally been fixed upon. In consequence of this it was impossible at times to comply with requests for the use of the "theatre. When such applications, had been made the committee had invariably referred

"them to the executive, who always gave "an affirmative roply when practicable." Mr. Pollar must have fancied that he was engaged in the ingenious occupation of gammoning a jury whilst the judge was anoozing. We take the most serious objections to his statement. A nice set of pieces verily did the amateurs produce ill the course of the past season to justify them in requiring the body of the theatre to paint scenery on during the entire period of it! Why until the production of the burlesque their pienes were of the most ordinary grade, and certainly could not have required half the scenery which was left over from the previous season. To be sure they did "do" a new drop scene, apparently for the purpose of occupying the floor. for it would disgrace a barn wall : the old one was fer better.

This daubing pretext is his best, his only excuse, and a precious bad one it is. We are happy to find him such a poor hand at the art of making, excuses, and taking the adage, for our text, his failure is just what might have been anticipated. He must expect this absurd excuse to do him as much service en the shake of the head of the player in The Critics that is to say, it will imply anything the imagination can conjure up. Does be mean to say, that this dawbing idea will palliare the bad faith practised on Monsieur Debarr, who having secured the refusal of the site, yielded his privilege to the Amateurs in consideration of the use of their building on completion, shirt had to wait for some months, in fact lintil the season was over before he got it? Does this painting pretext explain the attempt to squeeze $75 permights out of Mrs. Greig as the current expenses of the house, which are but $17 ? Does it explain or palliate the conduct of the Amateurs to the Envlore? One or more office bearers of the Amateur association voluntarily and spontaneously promised them the use of the theatre as often as required and then after stating that repairs which took three days to effect would occupy as many weeks, kept them waiting six weeks for the use of the theatre for three nights? Does it explain the fact that after the Faviors left, the theatre was invariably refused to every arliste dentil the acason was over?
